

Latter-day Scriptures in a Year in Chronological Order 365-Day Reading Plan

Our goal is to read all canonized Latter-day Saint scripture during a 365 day year—averaging about 117 verses per day. Most of this reading plan is in roughly historic-chronological order by subject matter (rather than by the date it was written). Most of the readings are kept in their book's modern chapter context. In some cases, a few key verses are taken out of their chapter setting for use with parallel scriptures on a specific topic. Those verses which are repeated a second time in this plan are marked in red. "JST" indicates some Joseph Smith Translation verses are included. Also, the original organizational division of each Bible book is cited in green.

I have selected some end-times chapters and verses for reading at the end of the reading-plan year. End-times prophecies often mention more than one major event or topic. Also, the sequence of many such future events is uncertain. So, end-times chronology is a guess, and the sequence of those readings is merely expedient. Chapters moved from the chronological-order section to the End-Times Topics are shown in blue.
